

NATIONAL ENVIRONMENTAL POLICY ACT

NEPA, the National Environmental Policy Act, is a federal law that provides for a decision-making process to consider the effects of federally funded or permitted projects on the natural and built environment.

NEPA provides for early and continuing opportunities during project development for public involvement and input.

NEPA requires that lead agencies consider public and agency input about the potential effects of a project on social, economic, and environmental conditions.

